

Former Pupil Profile

Former pupil Benjamin Nolan (Class of 2010) tells us about his further education and special memories from his time at Hamilton College.

Where are you now?

I am currently doing a Masters programme at Maastricht University in the Netherlands after graduating from the University of Glasgow with a BA (Hons.) in Law and French. In 2016, I will begin work for a large, commercial law firm in Edinburgh.

What did you learn at Hamilton College that you have taken into your career?

The school taught me the importance of a good work ethic and the social skills I gained are of high importance to me. The values instilled in me at Hamilton College have continued to influence my life.

What advice would you give to current Hamilton College students?

Go at your own pace. Too many people rush straight from school to university so if you aren't sure, explore other options and opportunities that might be more beneficial to you.

Any special memories from school?

On the rugby tour in Northern Ireland, my roommate and I missed the bus to the match and we had to be driven to the venue by the receptionist of the hotel!
